"It's not a matter of if, but when your business will get hacked. How prepared are you?" Anonymous

While technology is essential to increase profitability, improve customer service and operate efficiently, it exposes law firms and businesses to cyber risks. These risks include business operational risk, legal and compliance risk, and reputational risk. The ABA Standing Committee on Ethics and Professional Responsibility has issued formal opinions explaining that the Model Rules of Professional Conduct require attorneys to take precautions and to be ready for the inevitable, or face potential sanctions for ethical violations. Be proactive, get informed, minimize your risk, and learn how to be prepared for a cyber breach.

At the first of this three-part series, the speakers will discuss:

- Different types of cyber breaches and the current trends;
- The most common methods of attack and types of malware used by cyber criminals such as social engineering, viruses, ransomware, and spyware; and
- How cyber insurance helps to mitigate cyber risk.

Do not end up like those law firms that appear in the news because they were unprepared. Sign up today and get ready for the inevitable cyber breach.

"It's not a matter of if, but when your business will get hacked. How prepared are you?" Anonymous

Putting in place the most effective technology protections is essential, but does not ensure your cybersecurity. Crafting a risk mitigation plan is crucial for all businesses—especially lawyers and law firms, which possess valuable information and are targeted by cyber criminals. Risk mitigation plans identify threats to an organization's business systems, networks and data, and address the vulnerabilities and most likely vectors of attack. Risk mitigation plans include steps to create a culture of cybersecurity, identify policies and procedures to protect the organization such as ongoing awareness training, identify legal compliance standards, evaluate third party contracts that create additional risk exposure and employ metrics to measure risk mitigation efforts.

The second of this three-part series explains in-depth what a cybersecurity risk mitigation plan is, how it reduces your risk exposure and provides instructions for creating a risk mitigation plan for your office.

Getting caught without a cyber risk mitigation plan can seriously destroy your reputation and career. Sign up today.

Cybersecurity Risk Management Series

Part Three: Developing a Cybersecurity Incident Response Plan

Thursday, October 3, 2019 2:00 p.m. – 4:00 p.m.
Rhode Island Law Center, Cranston

Presenters

Jeffrey Padwa, Esq.
Padwa Law LLC

Jason Albuquerque,
CCISO-CGCI
Carousel Industries

Tuition

$135.00 admitted before
January 1, 2014

$125.00 admitted after
January 1, 2014

Credits

Subject to Article IV, Rule 3, this course has been approved by the Mandatory Continuing Legal Education Commission for a maximum of 2.0 credits inclusive of 0.5 ethics.

"It's not a matter of if, but when your business will get hacked. How prepared are you?" Anonymous

Are you prepared for the inevitable? What happens when hackers get into your computer network, lock you out, take control over all your electronic data and information—clients' information, including social security numbers, ongoing litigation files and emails, financial information, bank accounts, clients' hospital and health records, and even payroll information for you and your employees? What do you do? Who do you call? What do you say? What do you tell your clients? How do you get back to normal?

The third installment of this series reviews how a cybersecurity incident response plan helps your office recover when a cyber attack occurs, and provides guidance for creating your own incident response plan, which includes identifying and assigning people to critical roles in the recovery process, creating a communications plan, including compliance with breach notification requirements, and performing a post-event analysis to ensure that lessons learned from the experience are implemented for the future.

Are you ready for the day when hackers get into your computer network, disrupt your business operations and compromise the integrity of the data you maintain? Be prepared, or you may end up in the news and suffer reputational harm, or worse. Sign up today.

Globally recognized experts Steven Weise from Proskauer Rose, LLP in Los Angeles and Ed Smith from Morgan Lewis & Bockus, LLP in New York bring their national Commercial Law Update program back to Rhode Island for the ninth (9) consecutive year. Messrs. Weise and Smith will share their expertise and research on the most important case decisions and other developments affecting business and commercial law practices during the last year. Rhode Island attorneys Patrick Guida, Thomas Hemmendinger, and Lisa Kresge will again provide the local perspective as they highlight important Rhode Island case decisions and other Rhode Island commercial and other business law related developments.

This presentation includes up-to-the-minute summaries of the most relevant commercial law cases decided over the last twelve (12) months, including noteworthy decisions rendered as recently as a week before the program. You will receive a comprehensive review of recent developments in:

- Personal and real property secured transactions
- Guaranties
- The new Rhode Island virtual currency law
- UCC sales and personal property leasing
- Commercial paper and funds transfers
- Usury issues
- Uniform Commercial Real Estate Receivership Act
- And much more.

A seminar that will engage and entertain you all while updating your knowledge. Register today and stay current on the areas that directly affect your client.

Conducting Internal Investigations: Risks and Remedies

Tuesday, October 15, 2019 7:30 a.m. – 9:00 a.m.
Rhode Island Law Center, Cranston

Presenters

Miriam A. Ross, Esq.

Law Office of Miriam A. Ross

Tuition

$95.00 admitted before
January 1, 2014

$85.00 admitted after
January 1, 2014

Credits

Subject to Article IV, Rule 3, this course has been approved by the Mandatory Continuing Legal Education Commission for a maximum of 1.5 credits inclusive of 0.5 ethics.

Corporations are under increasing scrutiny and many companies have been faced with ethical scandals and allegations of mismanagement and misconduct. In addition, in recent years more and more whistleblowers have been coming forward to present allegations of impropriety. Given these trends, knowing how to conduct an effective internal investigation is crucial to protecting your clients or company. Companies need to ensure they have established systems in place to properly investigate allegations of improprieties and misconduct that are raised. Properly conducted, an internal investigation will help to identify risks and remedy potential issues.

This seminar will highlight how to conduct an effective internal investigation. Topics include:

- Determining the nature and scope of an investigation, document retention and confidentiality
- Role of in-house counsel, outside counsel and other experts
- Delivering an effective “Upjohn statement”
- Crafting appropriate interview questions and gathering information from witnesses
- Dealing with risks and ethical dilemmas that arise during an investigation
- Managing the investigation stakeholders appropriately, considering their loyalties and relationships, including senior management
- Preparing a final investigation report and voluntary disclosure considerations

Do You Have an Idea for an Article?

You have a lot to share, and your colleagues appreciate learning from you. The Rhode Island Bar Journal is always in need of scholarly discourses and articles, and we also encourage point-counterpoint pieces. Or, if you have recently given, or you are planning on developing a Continuing Legal Education seminar, please consider sharing your information through a related article in the Rhode Island Bar Journal. While you reached a classroom of attorneys with your CLE seminar, there is also a larger audience among the over 6,500 lawyers, judges and other Journal subscribers, many of whom are equally interested in what you have to share. For more information on our article selection criteria, please visit the Bar's website, under News and Bar Journal, and click Bar Journal Homepage. The Editorial Statement and Selection Criteria is also on page 4 of every issue. Please contact Director of Communications Kathleen Bridge at 401-421-5740 or kbridge@ribar.com if you have any questions.
